Jonah Flees From

1 The word of the LORD came to Jonah^a son of Amittai:^b "Go to the great city of Nineveh^c and preach against it, because its wickedness has come up before me."

²But Jonah ran^d away from the LORD and headed for Tarshish.^e He went down to Joppa,^f where he found a ship bound for that port. After paying the fare, he went aboard and sailed for Tarshish to flee from the LORD.^g

³Then the LORD sent a great wind on the sea, and such a violent storm arose that the ship threatened to break up.^h All the sailors were afraid and each cried out to his own god. And they threw the cargo into the sea to lighten the ship.ⁱ

But Jonah had gone below deck, where he lay down and fell into a deep sleep.^j The captain went to him and said, "How can you sleep? Get up and call^k on your god! Maybe he will take notice of us, and we will not perish."^l

⁷Then the sailors said to each other, "Come, let us cast lots to find out who is responsible for this calamity."^m They cast lots and the lot fell on Jonah.ⁿ

⁸So they asked him, "Tell us, who is responsible for making all this trouble for us? What do you do? Where do you come from? What is your country? From what people are you?"

⁹He answered, "I am a Hebrew and I worship the LORD,^o the God of heaven,^p who made the sea^q and the land."^r

¹⁰This terrified them and they asked, "What have you done?" (They knew he was running away from the LORD, because he had already told them so.)

¹¹The sea was getting rougher. So they asked, "What should we do to you to calm down for us?"

¹²"Pick me up and throw me into the sea," he replied, "and it will become calm. I know that it is my fault that this great storm has come upon you."^s ¹³Instead, the men did their best to row back to land. But they could not, for

Preface

The Purpose

The goal of the series is to enable church leaders to encourage and equip all who are involved with sharing the Word at any level

- elders, Sunday School teachers, house group leaders, assistant preachers and the like – to “handle the word of Truth correctly” (2 Timothy 2:15).

There are three parts to it:

1. Hearing the Word

How do you discern what God is saying when you read the Bible? - investigating, understanding, listening and applying it.

(NB ‘Hearing the Word’ applies to everyone - those reading the Bible for themselves as well as those preparing to share a Word with others.)

2. Preparing the Word

Having discerned the Word, how do you prepare to share it with others? - introducing, exposing, illustrating, applying, and concluding.

3. Sharing the Word

Having prepared the Word, how do you communicate it to others?

The Preparation

People who come to this part of the course have already been through ‘Hearing the Word’ and ‘Preparing the Word’.

Using the principles learned, they have been asked to prepare a talk on the parable of the prodigal son (Lk 15:11-31) of around 3-5 minutes to an audience of their choice – Youth Group, The Guild, Bible Study Group, Children’s or all-age Talk etc

The material

The material is arranged into – a) A Leader’s Guide – a full copy (with directions and example answers in italics).

b) A workbook with space to write answers.

Speaking in public

Whenever we use the human voice to communicate to a group, however large or small, we need to make sure people can actually hear us.

The great Greek orator, Demosthenes, used to go to the seashore, fill his mouth with pebbles, then try to project his voice over the sound of the waves!

Amplification can make quiet speech louder, but it can't make indistinct speech clearer. Besides, it may not be available where you are speaking.

For instance, when we read the Bible aloud in church it needs to be:

1. Audible
Loud enough for the furthest away and the deafest to hear, but without straining the voice.
2. Clear
Words correctly pronounced, enunciated distinctly.
3. Slow
Giving people time to assimilate what they are hearing.
4. Accurate
To ensure this, take time to read the passage aloud several times in private before going public. That way you won't be 'surprised' by difficult words you hadn't noticed!
5. Expressive
Ideally, hearers who cannot see the speaker should not be able to tell from the voice whether they are reading or just speaking.
(Those who record stories being read are good role models.)
6. Normal
Read in your usual voice - No affectations!

Task 1

Groups

Arrange yourself into groups of 3 or 4.

Each person reads Psalm 23 aloud, as if a large building.

The others circle a mark for each reader, using these 6 categories.

(1 = poor, 5 = excellent):

Reader	A	B	C	D
1. Volume	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5
2. Clarity	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5
3. Speed	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5
4. Accuracy	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5
5. Expression	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5
6. Voice	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5	1 2 3 4 5
Totals

When all in the group have read, tell each other the grades given, then discuss – in a gentle manner!

We will come back to several of these elements during the course.

Reading in public

To achieve the audibility needed, a person used to reading silently needs to be aware of a number of features that merit extra attention when reading aloud:

1. Emphasis

If . we . hear . some - one . read-ing . in . a . mono - tone, we quickly lose interest. In almost every normal spoken sentence, there is a stress on one or two words and a change of pitch. The goal of a person reading in public is to emphasise the correct words so as to express the author's meaning.

Don Paterson, professor of poetry at St Andrews University¹, compared two readers of Shakespeare's Sonnet 18, 'Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?'

Starting with a great 20th Century actor, he said

"..... Sir John Gielgud reads it with wonderful resonance, but clearly has no understanding of what it means... David Tennant, on the other hand, understands every word he is reading."

Listen to them on YouTube

(If possible, play them on 'You tube')

The placing of the emphasis affects the meaning of the sentence. By changing the stress on various words in a sentence, we can change the meaning communicated.

Try Task 2, to see this in practice.

¹ Speaking on "In our Time" with Melvyn Bragg on BBC Radio 4, 2/6/2021

Task 2

On your own

(3 mins)

Look at the sentence below: Following the two examples given, write down the implied meaning of the sentence when the reader emphasises one of the remaining four words:

“Very often we do aspire to being better people”

1 Very often – i.e. not just occasionally

2 we – i.e. maybe no one else does – but we do

Try some yourself:

3 do – i.e. some think we don't but in reality we do

4 aspire – i.e. but fail

5 being – i.e. not just pretending

6 better – i.e. not worse

Groups Discuss your answers with your group (3 mins)

All together (3 mins)

So, by changing the emphasis on certain words, the meaning of the sentence alters.

Imagine that sentence being used in the context of a New Year sermon on the theme, ‘Making resolutions’. The preacher might be making the point: ‘Lots of people make resolutions. There is a general desire to improve or better ourselves. Therefore, why not make the best resolution - to follow Jesus whole-heartedly?’

Given that context, which word should be emphasised?...

Reading Scripture

The people alive when the Scriptures were written mostly experienced them as they were read aloud to them.

Today, the reading of the Word is the primary act in all we do when we gather in the Lord's name. It is the centre of any talk given on the Bible and never merely a platform from which to start. It is our authority for speaking; so we must give it pride of place.

In one sense, one of the purest forms of preaching is simply reading the Word of God aloud, adding information which would have been known by the original hearers, though not explicit in the passage itself.

This is the Word of God. We must treat it as such! 'All Scripture is God breathed.....' (2 Timothy 3:16). So don't hurry or miss out bits you consider are 'irrelevant'! It is the most important thing we do!

As we saw in Task 2, context matters. In any sentence in the Bible, we need to understand its meaning in its context to be able to read it well.

Task 3

In Psalm 23, David, the King, is threatened on all sides by his enemies. This former shepherd boy acknowledges that, despite the appearance of circumstances, the Lord is in total control. God is the one who cares for, provides for, and looks after him.

With that context in mind –

On your own

(3 mins)

Underline the word(s) you would emphasise in each sentence from Psalm 23 (New International version)

The Lord is my shepherd,

I shall not be in want.

He makes me lie down in green pastures.

He leads me beside quiet waters;

He restores my soul

He guides me in paths of righteousness for his name's sake

Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil

For you are with me; your rod and staff, they comfort me.

You prepare a table before me in the presence of my enemies.

You anoint my head with oil;

my cup overflows.

Surely goodness and love shall follow me all the days of my life

And I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever. Ps 23 NIV

In Groups

3 mins

Read through Psalm 23 again one by one. This time emphasising the words you have chosen to underline.

After each one completes the reading, the others fill in the following assessment of expression, and then share your scoring with one another, giving comments where appropriate.

(1 is poor, 5 is excellent)

Reader	A	B	C	D

All together

Now read the whole Psalm aloud together as laid out below, emphasising the words in capitals.

Compare your choices of emphasis above with this one:

The Lord is my SHEPHERD;

I shall NOT be in want.

He makes me lie down in GREEN pastures.

He leads me beside STILL waters;

He RESTORES my soul

He leads me in paths of RIGHTEOUSNESS for his name's sake

*Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear
NO evil;*

For, you are WITH me; your rod and your staff, they COMFORT me.

You prepare a table before me in the -presence of my ENEMIES.

You anoint my head with OIL;

my cup OVERFLOWS.

Surely GOODNESS and MERCY shall follow me all the days of my life.

And I shall dwell in the house of the Lord FOREVER.

Leader explains the emphases by giving an expanded paraphrase below

The Lord is many things to me but very importantly, He is my SHEPHERD.

As far as provision is concerned, I will NOT be in need.

The pastures he takes me to are GREEN, not dry and sparse.

The waters are QUIET, not swift and dangerous

My soul he RESTORES. He doesn't wear me out.

He takes me on RIGHTEOUS paths, not perilous, sinful ones

Even when I am threatened by DEATH, I believe he is in complete control

Lord, it is YOUR rod and staff that COMFORT me

You, Lord, publicly declare your favour in the PRESENCE of all my enemies where they can witness it

You anoint me with OIL entrusting me to rule with you

My cup OVERFLOWS with your abundance of good things

GOODNESS AND MERCY not malice and judgement will be my constant companions through my life

The blessedness of the company of the Lord will last, not for a time, but FOREVER.

Reading the punctuation

Punctuation in a sentence helps the reader first to understand a passage and then to convey its meaning.

Look at the following incident -

‘A panda walks into a café. He orders a sandwich, eats it, then draws a gun and fires two shots in the air.

“Why?!” asks the confused waiter, as the panda makes towards the exit. The panda produces a badly punctuated Wildlife Manual and tosses it over his shoulder.

“I’m a panda,” he says at the door. “Look it up.”

The waiter, rather shaken, turns to the relevant entry in the manual and, sure enough, finds an explanation.

"Panda. Large black-and-white bear-like mammal, native to China. Eats, shoots and leaves."

(From Lynne Truss: Eats, Shoots and Leaves: The zero tolerance approach to Punctuation © Lynne Truss 2003, Profile Books Ltd)

The joke turns on the possible meanings of the final sentence. The author intended “shoots” and “leaves” as nouns, objects of the single verb, "eats", i.e. a panda is vegetarian: the shoots and the leaves of plants are its diet.

Inserting a comma, however, gives the mistaken impression that the last sentence contains three verbs, listing in sequence the panda's conduct: it eats, then it shoots, and finally it leaves. Hilarious misunderstanding, all from an unnecessary comma.

A full stop in your passage, or a comma, an exclamation mark, a question mark, a semi-colon, a colon, inverted commas etc should be apparent to the hearer by the way you read.

Task 4

On your own

2 mins

Here is some text without punctuation. Look at it closely then try to punctuate it so that it makes sense when read aloud.

I where he had had had had had had had had had had had his approval (That's 11 consecutive 'had's !)

All together

Without punctuation, it may be impossible to make sense of this!

Leader gives the Context:

A student of English - is explaining how his - teacher had marked work by himself (pupil A) and another (pupil B) —favouring A's use of 'had had' over B's use of a single 'had'.

Now listen to this being read by someone who does know the meaning.
(Leader reads from the punctuated version.)

On your own

Listen again to it being read slowly and, as it is being read, try to punctuate the sentence in your Workbook.

I where he had had had had had had had had had had had his approval

All together

Leader reads out the sentence again, announcing the punctuation: -

I, where he had had 'had', had had 'had had'. 'Had had' had had his approval.

The Preacher's Bee Hive

(With thanks to Rev Andrew Anderson)

When presenting the Word of God in any context, there are some do's and don'ts –

1. Preparation

a) Bee prayerful

As we prepare to minister God's Word, the question at the front of our minds should not be about ourselves – 'How will I get a talk together' – but about God: 'What does God want to say to me and through me?' We need to start here and keep that question before us throughout.

b) Bee thorough.

The task of ministering God's word to others demands the very best we can give. Reliance on the inspiration of the Holy Spirit in the pulpit is not an excuse to skip the 'perspiration' needed in the study to understand the Bible and-construct a talk.

c) Bee modest

We do not preach 'ourselves' (2 Cor 4:5). So there must be nothing to draw peoples' attention to ourselves, lest it distract them from hearing his Word. This includes clothing and actions. (More on this at p16)

d) Bee ready

When called upon to speak, ensure there is nothing left to do other than speak!

2. Presentation

a) Bee heard.

'...hear the word I speak' (Ezekiel 33.7).

Whatever is said, however good its content or compelling its delivery, it will count for nothing if it cannot be easily heard. Many venues have very poor acoustics. If there is a public address system, use it: the microphone may well also feed an induction loop, which is hugely helpful to those with appropriate hearing aids. Try everything out before the congregation arrives, to find a suitable setting, so no one is distracted by straining to hear.

Speak slowly enough for people to assimilate what is being said. Whether reading or preaching, you already know and understand the words you will say before you say them. A listener at a distance, on the other hand, needs time for the word to reach them, then to hear it, recognise it, grasp the meaning of the word and the sentence, all of which take longer than in close-up conversation.

We also tend to speak faster when we are nervous.

b) Bee interesting.

It was said of Jesus that the people ‘listened to him with delight’ (Mark 12.37). – He certainly never bored people!

When He spoke:

- i. The content was Biblical, and God-centred.
- ii. The presentation was visual – using items in nature around Him or engaging his hearers’ imaginations.

We won’t be boring if we follow His example!

c) Bee enthusiastic

If you are bored – there’s a good chance your audience will be too!

d) Bee brief

It is best to stop speaking before your congregation stop listening! To go on too long is counterproductive. The actual time will vary from place to place, person to person and subject to subject.

e) Bee engaging

When addressing people, it is important to acknowledge them. This is generally done by making eye contact. Eye contact underlines the personal nature of the communication: I am speaking to you!

f) Bee animated

Movement is good as long as it is appropriate to what is being said, and doesn’t distract. Beware of the ‘windmill syndrome’ ie wild, random arm movements that are insignificant and distract the hearer’s attention.

g) Bee urgent.

‘Today if you hear his voice do not harden your hearts’ (Ps 95:7,8; Heb 4:7).

At some point, we need to convey the urgency of the Gospel and its appeal. Human beings need to make a decision. God’s Word requires a response, and our hope is that its hearers will leave motivated by God to change. There is a real sense in which the time is short, indeed the time for our decision is now!

h) Bee expectant

“The Word of God is living and active. Sharper than any double-edged sword, it penetrates even to dividing soul and spirit, joints and marrow; it judges the thoughts and attitudes of the heart. Nothing in all creation is hidden from God’s sight. Everything is uncovered and laid bare before the eyes of him to whom we must give account.” (Hebrews 4:12,13)

It is not our talk that will change hearts and lives; it is the Word of God. However faltering our efforts, if God has called us to speak His Word, we must believe and trust he is able to communicate with others through us.

i) Bee alert.

After Paul’s sermon in Athens, some of his listeners told him,
‘We want to hear you again on this subject’ (Acts 17.32).

The reaction to a sermon can be very varied: from polite but sincere appreciation to (outright) disagreement with what’s been said. We need to be sensitive and alert to the impact of our words, always aware we could have done better, and humble and eager enough to learn to improve.

Just sometimes, we become aware as we are reading the Scriptures that someone is listening with particularly close attention. Keep reading, but immediately pray silently with another part of your brain for the Holy Spirit to make the words come alive in that listener.

Being prayerfully alert to God’s Holy Spirit should characterise all our preparation, delivery and obedient living out of the Word of God.

Actions in illustration

Sometimes, when speaking to a smaller group, there is opportunity to use your movement to help communicate a point that you are making, visually.

Distractions

Clerical gear (Geneva gown and cassock) at the time of its inception was the normal style of academic clothing. The distinctive feature from the Reformation onwards was that for preachers, it was black, not colourful, and functional, not loaded with supposedly priestly connotations formerly given to it. The rationale was that nothing should distract the congregation from concentrating on the Word of God as it was preached.

To some populations today, the gown itself is the distraction!

Hudson Taylor, unlike other missionaries in China during the 19th Century, dressed like the people he was trying to reach, in a coolie hat and fastened his hair in a plat. The equivalent in the UK today might be (for men) a grey suit and a plain tie. Others might say even the tie is obsolete!

In sharing the Word, we must be careful that our dress, demeanour and mannerisms do not distract from the Word of God.

Here are some things which might distract:

1) Florid ties

A startling series of neck ties might give rise to ‘I wonder what he will be wearing today’.

2) Repeated words

Some public speakers are prone to using words without any meaning. eg ‘you know’, ‘like’, ‘err’.

Donald Dewar, a famous Scottish politician, was known for repeating ‘Em, err, eh’ in almost every sentence, until with the advent of digital recording, kind journalists edited them out before broadcast!

When nervous, e.g. in an unscripted debate, people use ‘fillers’ like, ‘It seems to me,’ while thinking of the next thing to say. With effective preparation and notes, such ‘fillers’ should be unnecessary.

3) Habits

e.g. If someone regularly and randomly pulls his earlobe, or moves from a lectern to the open stage and back.

4) Different voice

Sometimes when speaking to a gathering about the Bible we may be tempted to use another, more 'religious' voice. For some, it may give an air of seeming reverence; for others it may be a distraction from what you are trying to communicate. It could imply God is not interested in our everyday affairs, or our routine concerns are not 'holy' enough for God.

5) Random hand movements

You might notice this on television where someone reporting on an incident is randomly moving their hands. Unless it helps to convey their meaning, it distracts the viewer's attention from the reporter's message.

So make sure any movements you do enhance what you are trying to say and add to the communication

Practice

Task 6

We are now going to give the short talk on Luke 15:11-31 that you prepared for at the start of the 'Preparing the Word' Course and have no doubt refined in the light of all we learnt there!

On your own Gather your thoughts 3 mins

Group Each in group give short talk. 20 mins

After each talk, fill in the following assessment of the delivery and then share your scoring with one another giving comments where appropriate.

- What did you feel you all tended to do well?
- What did you feel were the most common faults?
- What do you have to work on, or do differently next time?

Commentaries

When preparing, help may be drawn from what others have written. Resist the temptation to start there, though, because once you open the commentaries it is hard to think for yourself!

There are a number of ‘one volume’ Bible commentaries. These give background and comment on every book in the Bible.

e.g. The New Bible Commentary Revised, Inter Varsity Press (IVP).

There are sets of commentaries on individual books in the Bible.

e.g. The Bible Speaks today IVP
The Daily Study Bible St Andrew’s Press
Focus on the Bible Christian Focus

Don Carson’s ‘For the Love of God’ gives a simple, brief, trustworthy exposition of passages of the Bible in the Daily Bible reading scheme by Robert Murray McCheyne. His two volumes cover half the Bible. This is a gold mine! It is an education for the hungry church member and an invaluable resource for the conscientious preacher of God’s Word.
